DETAILS? This role is complex, which is what makes it so interesting. Other than understanding the basic components of the role, we all have to continually strive to work with some of the unexpected, more challenging aspects of our role. This series will focus on one of those scenarios on each call. Time will be spend giving the scenario and choices I made to work with it. There will also be adequate time for Q and A.

One of the benefits of this series, in addition to the content, is the chance to spend time talking with others who do this work in other parts of North America.

Because this will include a small number of participants and many schedules are involved, you will be notified no later than one week prior to the first session if the series will occur. If I receive the minimum number before that time, you will be notified as soon as I know.
